Training for all teachers...

Making complex tasks simpler to manage

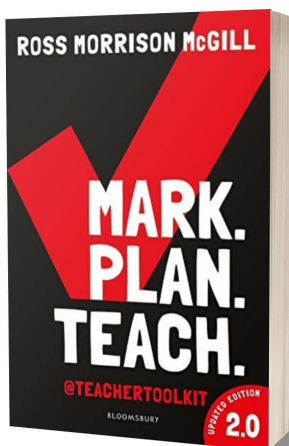

Mark Plan Teach was first developed as a teaching and learning methodology in a large secondary school to support ~110 teachers. This research has since been shared with 30,000 teachers and has been introduced to over 300 schools and colleges across the world. MPT has been instrumental in shaping many teaching policies and methods...

Developing teacher autonomy

Schools and colleges seek consistency, yet no organisation can claim they have ever achieved it. So how does any team achieve any success if consistency is so inconsistent? One of the many solutions offered is to develop clarity and coherence rather than compliance.

Do less, not more

This training is full of classroom ideas and leadership strategies to demonstrate why teachers should do less, not more, to become truly effective. Ross will demonstrate how this balance can be achieved where all teachers can achieve professional autonomy.
